💭 🙄 Monthly Message from our EQ President 🙄 💭

In his April 2026 general conference address, Elder Gary E. Stevenson told the story of Japan's Kansai International Airport, a place that hasn't lost a single piece of luggage in 30 years. Not one bag. The secret is the discipline of constantly searching for and implementing small improvements, day after day, by the people doing the everyday work. I have plenty of room for improvement!

That idea hit me because discipleship works the same way.

We talk a lot about big spiritual moments: conversion stories, priesthood blessings that change everything, conferences that recharge us. Of course, those moments matter, but the thing that actually keeps us aligned with the Savior over a lifetime isn't one dramatic course correction. It's the quiet systems we build into the daily routines that keep us pointed toward Him when life gets noisy.

What does your system look like in your home or your calling? It could be a five-minute family devotional before the chaos of the morning. It could be a recurring reminder on your phone to text someone you minister to. Maybe it's keeping a gospel journal, jotting down one thing the Spirit taught you that day. None of these is headline-worthy. All of them, compounded over months and years, change who you become.

Elder Stevenson framed our ministering and our work with the rising generation as sacred stewardship, caring for Heavenly Father's most precious belongings. The best way to honor our responsibility isn't to white-knuckle it. It's repeatable habits of care and intention.

The airport staff at Kansai even place bags on the carousel with the handles facing out, to make pickup easier. It's a tiny thing. But it says everything about what they value.

What small system could you put in place this week to keep yourself, or someone you watch over, a little closer to the Savior?

Preparedness Corner – April – Emergency Comms

I've written about emergency communications before, but I'll be honest. I'm revisiting it because I need to do better myself. I don't have a solid family plan in place. Not a real one. And that's something I'm working to fix.

Here are the basics I'm focusing on:

- Designate an out-of-area contact. Local phone networks get overloaded fast during emergencies. It's often easier to reach someone out of state than across town. Pick one person everyone calls or texts to check in with, a central point of contact when you can't reach each other directly.
- Agree on two meeting points. One close to home for something like a house fire, and one farther out like the church building or a landmark, for situations where you can't return to the neighborhood. The key word is agreed on, before anything happens.
- Write it down. A small card in a backpack, wallet, or a child's school bag still works when a phone doesn't. Take it a step further and make a laminated card for each person in your family with the contact name and number, both meeting points, and any other key details. It's a simple, tangible thing you can do this week, and everyone ends up with something they can actually hold onto.
- Practice it once. There's a real difference between knowing a plan and having done it.

I'm not there yet, but I'm working on it. Maybe we can get there together. I plan to check in at the first quorum meeting in May to see how everyone is progressing, myself included.

EQ Lesson 3/22 – And Now I See

Instructor: Jeff Morgan

Talk: The Power of Ministering to the One - Elder Peter Johnson

“As we minister to the one, we invite the one to come unto Christ and to worship in the house of the Lord to receive of His redeeming power. In other words, we help one another become devoted disciples as we minister to the one in ways that lead to the house of the Lord.”

We discussed the Samaritan women at the well, and the lame man from birth, and how this lead to Christ and the temple. We discussed the trials we have experienced, similar to Elder Johnson’s where he found out that Black African members for a time were not allowed to enjoy all the blessings of worshipping in the house of the lord. We discussed how he was able to overcome that struggle. We also discussed struggles members of the quorum have had, and how they have or are overcoming them. We closed with a challenge for each of us to take our trials to the Lord, and to listen while in the temple for the answers.

EQ Lesson 4/12 – Forsake Not Your Own Mercy

Instructor: Brock Griffith

Talk: Taking on the Name of Christ - Elder Dale G. Renlund

“So we more fully take upon ourselves the name of Jesus Christ through identification, remembrance, emulation, and alignment. Doing these four leads us to a fifth parallel—empowerment. We access God’s power and blessings in our lives.”

Brock led a discussion on what it means to take someone else’s name, including Jesus Christ. We discussed people who have impacted our lives, much like the story in this talk about Dr Selzman taking on President Nelson’s name with his professorship appointment. We also talked about the cycle of Identification, Remembrance, Emulation, Alignment, Empowerment.
